Corporate Disk Company adds new digital media department to include video/ web production and on-demand streaming delivery to their suite of services.

Corporate Disk Company, a full service DVD & CD-ROM manufacturing facility, has just announced that they will be adding a new digital media department to their existing replication, digital printing, packaging and fulfillment services. The acquisition of Quickstream.tv, leverages both Limelight Networks powerful and expansive streaming CDN (Content Delivery Network) and the Brightcove video platform.

The explosion of rich media and digital content as well as the speed of broadband has transformed the way the world engages with information and video. "Quickstream.tv will facilitate a strategic initiative to offer more multi-media services to our clients including video and web production" said Joe Foley, VP Sales.

"For over 25 years we have continued to introduce new innovative technology," commented President, Bill Mahoney. "We can now produce and deliver our customers content via print, on disc and the internet. Our sales continue to accelerate year over year and we are on pace for 2008 to be our best ever. "

"With the recent introductions of dual-sided disc, DVDPlus© OneDisc™, the eco friendly Thin Line DVD and now, Streaming Video Delivery, we will continue to stay ahead of the curve by offering new products and fulfillment services" added Dave Gimbel, VP Operations.
